

About This Area

Paint Brush Prairie Conservation Area is in southern Pettis County, about eight miles south of Sedalia. The Conservation Department acquired the original 74-acres for the area in 1978. Subsequent acquisitions have brought the area to its present 314-acre size.

The northwest portion of Paint Brush Prairie has been designated a Missouri Natural Area, which protects a diverse plant community of over 200 natural tallgrass prairie plants.

Slightly raised circular mounds measuring up to 12 feet in diameter, known as mima mounds or prairie mounds, are found on the area. Their origin is unknown.

Management of Paint Brush Prairie focuses on maintaining the unique prairie habitat. Periodic spring burns eliminate invading non-prairie plants, such as fescue and cedar. Haying is also an important management tool.
